

Dan Hilton

Dan Hilton is a veteran of Capitol Hill and trade association advocacy.

He began on staff at the House Armed Services Committee, before joining the office of Representative Walter B. Jones (R-NC), followed by Rep. Randy Neugebauer (R-TX) where he oversaw military, transportation and energy policy.

Following his tenure on Capitol Hill, he was selected to open the Washington office of the American Supply Association (ASA), the national trade association representing distributors and manufacturers serving the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling-Piping (PHCP) and Industrial Pipe-Valve-Fitting (PVF) industries. There, he successfully launched ASA-PAC, the Association's Legislative Fly-in and facilitated the introduction of family-run plumbing wholesalers to Legislators and their staff.

He then led federal and international contracting issues at the American Council of Engineering Companies (ACEC), the business voice of America's engineering and design services industry. He was responsible for maintaining the Council's relationships with federal clients such as the Army Corps of Engineers, NAVFAC and others. He successfully led their efforts to challenge federal contracting policies related to COVID-19, loosening access to federal installations, and worked to design fair and reasonable contracting rules and opportunities for the private sector.

He is a graduate of the State University of New York at Oswego (SUNY Oswego) where he received a BA in Political Science. In addition, he earned an MBA and an MA in Government from the Carey Business School of Johns Hopkins University.

He resides in Fairfax, VA with his wife Ana and three daughters.
